Dear Government,

Although the Mainland have sent many supply ships, it is still not enough for the poor survivors living on Norwich.

Firstly, there were many crimes over the last week and they were caused by the lack of supplies, mostly food. Furthermore people, old and young were caught stealing medicine that caused five innocent victims to die before the sea could kill them.

So the Government can see that many lost souls with medical needs sadly cannot survive. As a result of sending supplies and ships over to Norwich I, and all the poor people, will be really grateful. You have the choice!

Most victims on the flooded island Norwich, have no choice and are dying due to the serious illness. Many children are suffering from diabetes, asthma and many other illness and no one can help them, only qualified doctors. Surely anyone with a heart would save these desperate souls. These children are waiting for someone to save them, but no one ever does. Could it be possible that the Government is their saviour?

All those children and I, have lived on Norwich for our lives so we know that many desperate souls wanting to leave the island know many helpful survival skills. For instance, if the Government takes them to Mainland, then they can work for him. On the other hand, the Government moral duty is to help the people of Norwich; we are still on country. It does not matter if the country is big or small, we should help each other because we have the right to live, don't we?

So you can see it is not easy living on a flooded island, without food, medicine and without parents. Imagine you were in my position; how would you feel? You can become well known to the whole Britain if you want to send us supply ships to Norwich, it is your choice?

Yours faithfully,
Joe
